Project Updates

Low Manganese Drinking Water

An important project to help keep Napier water clean and clear is complete. Bores at Awatoto have been tested, commissioned and had their treatment plants installed so they can now be connected to the main drinking-water network. These bores are low in naturally-occurring manganese, which reacts with chlorine to discolour water.

Pandora Industrial Main Renewal

The Pandora industrial pipeline and has been out of operation for a number of years due to being blocked. It's 8.6km long. This project aims to clean out the pipeline to bring it online by May 2023. Nearly 50% of the pipeline has been cleaned out, placing the project ahead of schedule. There will be a break in the cleaning operations for a few weeks so the ground can firm up before works continue along the Georges Drive drainage reserve.

Maraenui Storm Water Trunk Mains

This project aims to provide an upgraded public stormwater infrastructure network to service the Maraenui area. The new stormwater network will help maintain the level of service within the catchment area during severe weather events. We have engaged a contractor to carry out the works with the concept design currently being completed.

MTG Hawke's Bay's Silver Shadows exhibition tells the story of Napier's Marineland from beginning to end, from the fun times through to the controversy and the eventual closure.

Marineland opened 28 January 1965. Over four decades the oceanarium housed several species of marine wildlife including approximately 90 dolphins.

Initially, Marineland was purely an entertainment zoo, showcasing intelligent mammals performing complex routines and displaying comedic human traits. As perceptions changed towards keeping marine mammals in captivity for commercial gain, Marineland evolved into a sanctuary for injured animals, focusing on education and conservation.

Throughout its complex history, Marineland was subject to controversy, especially over keeping dolphins in captivity. Changing public and government sentiment, along with tired facilities and internal conflict, eventually led to the demise of Marineland. On 25 April 2009, the doors shut for the final time.

Silver Shadows is open at MTG Hawke's Bay from now until March 2023.
